SLIPSACK TAYLOR RESOLVED THAT HE WOULD RIDE OR DIE.

He Could Not Learn and So Hanged Him-Zeara — The First Elopement In the Of Jewish persocution, or of the after life, Thompson Street Bleyele Club.

It was clearly evident to the 60 or more members of the Thompson Street Bloycle club who waited for the regular weekly meeting to open that President Toots had something on his mind of considerable im-portance. He looked surlous and worried, and the routine proceedings were hurried over in a manner to show that his inter-ast was beyond. There were various sur-miss of suming disaster, but no one susperied the truth until it fell from his lips.
"My from," said the president as he arose in his place, "de mainful doory debreak de news to yo' dat Brudder Sliptack Taylor am no mo' on de face of dis airth. He was, as yo' all know, one of de charter members of disclub, an a man who took de greatest loterest in all our purceedings, At moon today I met him on de street, an he was suckin a lemon an carryin home a perous plaster for his back. His eyes had a furaway look, an I noticed due he had a limp, but he 'peared to be in good health an specitis. Two hours ago he was found hangin to a tree in his back yald at de cand of a clothesilne. His wife fust thought he was playin a game on bor to find our how much she laved him. But, also, the drefful truth was soon apparent. Brudder Taylor was as dead as a deabout! an as revide was an dead as a dominate and as a piece of sneet iron in Jinuary.

"Was domestic ornappiness de reason for dis tracedy?" continued the president as he wiped away a tear. "No. Things went all right at home. He was not hard up. He was not elek. He had no secret all reasons. It was a thair apparent ones of course an effect. De bike was de cause, an do effect was dat he was found dead. Brudder Taylor was a man 50 years ola. Fur de last ten y'ars he has had rheumatiz, tiles, caliblains, fame back, heart disease, estimas an seberal other ailments. Au if dur had been a hundred fat an jules watermillyons just ober de fence he could not hev clamb ober to git one. I was no dan surprised when be justed dis club. It didn't seem to me dat he could ever be able to ride de wheel, but he would listen to no argyment. He jest made up his mind dat do wheel was good fur what niled him, an dat a five mile spin befo' breakfast would soon make a young man of him, an it was no bee to burt his feelin's over de matter. Nuffin has sher happened to gin me mo' paid dan to watch de efforts of dat pure one man to conker do wheal. He was up belo' daylight an our arter dark. Sometimes he would come home limits on bonf legs; sometimes day would bring him on a dray. He fell on his head, on his car, on his back, on his side. He got a bruiso at ebery rod, an he left a piece of hids on abery block. He run into fences etreet kyars, los wagons, backs and pedestrians, an vehicles of varus soris an kinds run over him. Policemen threatened, women wept an men guyed him, but he kept right on. He was gwine to ride that like or die. "Die arternoon Brudder Taylor went out as usual to her his usual struggle wid do wheel. He had cocked de saddle up, so ked do chain an blowed up do tires, an de feelin had come to him dat success was within als reach. Nobody happened to see what followed. It am s'bosed, howeber, dat in de exhiberathum of his speerits he attempted a flyin flount. Befor dat he had always gut up a tree to drup into de saddle. De attempt was a fallure. When he riz on his toe, his bike started off. So fur as I kin trace it by scraps of clothin an loose buttons, it cantered oler a loss block, dedged three times around a shade tree au den galloped across de street an A Gigantle Production Parities. a brick wall. Braider raylor was a on de ground with his legs tied in a hard on de ground with his legs tied in a hard knot an his head driven down so far to reserve to the last they couldn't find his neck to put a piece of her on it. When dey got him outsingled, he was advised to go home an stick to a rockin cheer do balance of his days, an he limped away widout a word. He went struight home, passed into deback ya'd, and denext seen of him he was cold in death. He had evidently cum to de conclushun dat do blke was not fur nim. He had planned an anticipated, an de reaction had tin too much for him. Feelin das life widous de bike would be a dreary waste an hevin made up his mind at last dat he was a beaten man, he put de noose over his bend on let his specificall away to dat land wher's pa'r of wings kin gin de bike ten rods de start an best it bome obery day in do week. Each member of de club will wear de usual badge of mourn-

in fur de next 30 cays, an de sum of $20 will be sent to the grievin widder to beip pay funoral expenses. An I her another startlin plees of news for de members of dis club," contin-ued the president after a pause. "Last night Bratuer Sundown Smith an de wile of Brudder State Hights Thompson went out for a spin in de gleamin. Delr lamps was lighted, delr chains deely greated, an dey carried along de usual 42 wronches, oil cans an odder tenglements of repair. De glosmin glosmed, an as doy rodo away de fireflies flew about an de whippoorwill sang his song of love. Brudder Thompson put de callien to bed an den sot up an waited wid his feet in a tub of water. De clock struck labou an 18 an 1 an 2, but his wife returned not De hours crept slowly on, an when daylight cum an she was still missin he knocked at my doah. We consulted de police an visitde margue, an it was three hours bafo' we learned de truth. Brudder Smith and Sister Thompson had sloped, an befo'day-light were 30 miles away an still ped-alls. Dis am de fust case of stopement de bievela, white or black, to be recordd in de history of de world, an while our sympathies may go out fur de stricken husband we can't help but feel a lectle proud obse de surcumstance. Brudder Smith had only 60 cents to his pocket when der started, an we may reuken on seein loaf of 'ou widin a week or so Der will, of co'es, he expelled from de club, but if Brudder Thompson kin oberlook the matter an take his wife back we shap't hey a word to say. It was predicted long ago dat de day would cum when de blke would be used for Jist eleh purposes, an while de majority of us smiled at de ideah we hav now got our eyes open od an kin take proper precaushuns. rest of yo' kin do no yo' please, but as fur me I either ride out wid Mrs. Tout when de gleamla comes an de whtopoorwill logs or she stays at bome an puts de chillen to bed an pleas up de coddsh for breakfast, not dat I hove't confidence is her an de members of disclub, but bekas-dar am no sellin what sort of a new ideal. the blice am gwine to bring out next, as a prodest man am ailus prepared for alsmergencies. We will now adjourn."

-Atlanta Constitution. HUNG ON A TAIL.

In the grand old days, some few hundred years back, there lived in India the great and mighty Rajah Bahut Matwallah, of whose mystic birth and bettles with the demons, resulting in the conquest of the whole of the vast country of the Decoan, history gives such a graphic account. Still this "Hight of the world" was not content. One thing still was wanting. His treasury was full to overflowing, his precious stones were incomparable, his "pillars of the state" obsequious and oringing, yet one wish remained unsatis-In his youth he had beard from astrologers and learned men of a country beyond the clouds that bound the world, where the inhabitants had milk white skins and long talls. To procure one of these remarkable creatures was the one ungratified lenging that so absorbed the wise and mighty king, the defender of the poor.

At last the long looked for news came, and the wold in his heart was about to be filled. Within a few days march of the cap-ital a strong party of cavalry was escor-ing the priceless treasure, the white man. The remarkable creature had been captured on the ses coast, and is was a doubtful point whether he had dropped from the sky or been cast up by the comm or frum the worlds beneath. In majestic repose sat the great king on his throne—out from a single roby—his feet resting on a footstool shaped from a faultless dismond, and gave the order for the white man to be produced from his

The reil removed and the door opened, a handsome white man, dressed in a loose cloth and waistband, jumped lightly out of the cage, and throwing himself on his knees before the throne respectfully awaited the orders of the king.
"Tell the creature," said the fountain of delight to the grand winter, "that it has leave to show its talk " Bowing to the ground, the white man informed the master of the ceremonies that to his great regret he had no tail to ex-hibit, otherwise to hear was to obey. The coursiers' looks began to fall at once, with the unerring foresight peculiar to dwelfers within all royal precincts where royal displacture is upt to result in pro-miscuous chopping off of heads.

Happily for every one, royalty was that

"The king's words," be said, "are just, and dirt is on his slave's head," and then continued in the same strain to any that, in spite of his disgrace in not having a tail, he requested for a moment to be

He then went on to assure the magnant-He then went on to assure the magnant-mous center of the universe and the bright and luminous intellects that sur-rounded the world's throne that, over-whelmed with shame and confusion as he was, he yet hoped to be allowed to redeem his disgrace. He had not quite attained the age at which this valued appendage usually makes its appearance, though the time was fast approaching.

He tentured to suggest that if he were kept alive a short time and was supplied with proper food, such as would encourage the growth of his tall, then the laudable curiosity of the master of nations and his NO CHANGE OF CARS curresity of the masser of nations and his court would be gratified.

The prisoner had requested, in order to encourage the rapid growth of a tall, that he should be supplied with a certain quan-tity of intoxicating fluid and a plentiful supply of dry gress, in addition to his or-

Then suddenly shricks and sounds of wailings were heard. The saintly rajuh turned a stokly yellow as visions of insurrection and the fate of his predecessors for the last dozen or so reigns, flashed before his mind's eye, but he soon recovered his self possession as he witnessed the approach of one man being dragged along by

The poor wretch's howls continued till he was on the pavement at the king's feet, where from the violence of the fail he lay for a few moments inscrethie.

There was a general hustling to get out of the way and withdraw from under the royal observation, and at last the enptain of the guard, being pushed without any chance of escape into the monarch's presence, announced (tearing his turban the while) that the white captive was not in the turret chamber-was, in fact, nowhere to be found. He wound up by suggesting some delightful forms of torture for the juiler, who lay on the pavement.

As the deservedly punished latter under-went the highest development of thumbscrewing, flaring alive, etc., he told how when he entered the white man's chamber he discovered a strong rope of swisted grams suspended from a bar of the window grating, and how on pulling it up he found a piece of board attached at the end on which were inscribed these words:
